Assignment 6A

Low Fidelity

This is the low fidelity prototype of the new shopping bag page. I designed this similar to how Amazon fashions their checkout page. On the left are cards for each product that shows the price and how many you ordered. On the right is the order summary that tallies everything up in a visible way and leads you to the checkout page. I put the order summary/checkout button on the right rather than the bottom of the page because that way, it's one of the first things you see when landing on the page. Users won't need to scroll to the bottom of the page to checkout.
